These donors are willing to open their checkbooks to keep taxes as low as possible. They support a wide range of activities that include shrinking government spending, simplifying the tax code, decreasing tax burdens on hard-working Americans, and instituting state and federal term limits. They support a Constitutional amendment that would compel the government to balance the budget and prevent further national debt. These donors have a deep interest in overhauling the tax code and educating their fellow citizens about the dangers of big government.

The National Tax Limitation Foundation (NTLF) was founded in 1976 as the education and research arm of the National Tax Limitation Committee.
